Have access to language training resources

More than a decade of language training success.

For more than a century, General Motors has worked tirelessly to earn customers for life by building iconic brands that inspire passion and loyalty through a winning combination of delivering breakthrough technologies and serving the communities in which GM employees live and work across the globe.

Improved learner engagement with innovative technology

Better ROI
with more efficient language training spend

Make language learning accessible for all General Motors employees

Solution

All GM employees can request a Rosetta Stone license. Plus, global language program administrators engage with each team directly to provide tools that help structure local programs that meet each team member's learning needs. As a direct result of this effort, GM has realized a 726% return on their language learning investment.

It's been exciting to watch as Rosetta Stone has helped us evolve our language learning programs across our organization.
