Language training through a new lens

When HR and L&D propose company-provided language training for employees, business leaders usually follow up with questions, including:

- Why is company language training more effective than other options
- Will this program incentivize employees—personally and professionally
- How will language training align with our business goals

Companies come to realize that their return on employee language learning can be measured in many ways, such as improved employee communication skills, support for diversity and inclusion initiatives, and reduced employee turnover.

As the global leader in language learning, Rosetta Stone has business covered. Whether your language training targets talent development, productivity enhancement, market expansion, or any other initiative, there is an award-winning Rosetta Stone® business solution that's right for your company.
